In the wild, peregrines lay their 3" eggs on precarious ledges on sheer rock cliffs. They don't make a nest, a simple scraped-out depression is sufficient. Peregrine Falcon eggs represent the future of their species. Help ensure the future of Peregrine Watch by becoming a Nest Egg sponsor!

A face only a mother could love... young peregrine falcons are called EYASSES, and are usually fitted with a numbered band between 12 and 20 days of age.

Young peregrines grow FAST!! Hatching from a 3" egg, they reach their full size in just 30 days! When you become an Eyas sponsor, you will promote the healthy growth of Peregrine Watch!

Only 42 days after they hatch, young peregrines are ready to fly! They go through a progression of steps and stages to prepare themselves for flight, developing their muscles, balance and coordination before they take to the air. They have changed from awkward eyasses to beautiful birds before our very eyes! Your Fledgling level sponsorship will help Peregrine Watch achieve its full potential.

After leaving the nest, young peregrines learn to hunt and perfect their flight skills as they become self-sufficient. In September, they set out ALONE on their annual migration to Central America. Your FLIGHT sponsorship will give Peregrine Watch the self-sufficiency we need to provide the highest quality programming possible to our visitors.
